

REDO Guidelines

Teacher should:

- determine which assignments are available for redo.
- share guidelines for redos with students and parents
- follow these guidelines
- offer redos for a clearly designated period of time following the return of an assignment
- require that students have a plan for improving their understanding of the assignment
- allow all students to redo the assignment if it is available for redo and not attach a score to it (ex. Only students earning a 2.0 or less can redo the assignment).

Students should be informed that:

- by completing the redo, I have one chance to improve my grade and the higher score will prevail.
- my parent must sign my original work (teacher discretion).
- my teacher can change the format of the assignment for my redo. Therefore, I might be getting an entirely new assignment to complete.
- I can request a redo once for each assignment.
- redos must be completed within the teacher-established period of time following the assignment's return.
- redos cannot be requested once a test is given on the material, the unit is completed, or the quarter ends.
- redos can only be requested for work submitted on time.
- denial of redos is at my teacher's discretion.
